Wayne Shover: sports car champ

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

Wayne Shover, a longtime resident of West Sacramento who can often be seen motoring around town in his 1960 Austin Healy, began his love affair with fast-moving vehicles when he was only 16 years old, racing the back country roads of Modesto and Turlock, California in his 1956 Ford Fairlane. He has since done autocross, go-carts, drag racing, and dirt bike racing, but he was never really able to dedicate himself to full-time racing because of his deep concern for his family.

"My dad has always loved to race," explained his daughter, Kari Kalista, who provided all the background information for this article, "but he loved his family more, so racing has always had to take a back seat to making sure he had a full-time job that could support all of us. I've never met a harder working man than my father, and there's been times when he's worked two or three jobs at the same time just to make sure his family was financially secure."

Now, at the age of 61, Wayne has become the oldest competitor to be awarded a championship by the Sports Car Club of America (SCCA), winning the 2006 ITC Championship in his 1972 red Datsun 510. The SCCA is an amateur and professional motorsports organization with over 55,000 members and they sanction over 2000 events each year in road racing, autocross and rallying. Their racing competitions are held all over Northern California, including two world famous tracks, Laguna Seca and Infineon. In addition to winning the ITC Championship, Wayne also recorded the fastest lap and was instrumental in helping his teammate finish only 12 points behind.

"I have many fond childhood memories of sitting in the stands while my dad raced motorcycles," recalled his daughter, Kimberly London. "And when I was a teenager attending River City High School, the neighbors thought my sister and I were really popular with the boys, but they were usually just over at the house to see my dad and get him to work on their cars."

Family and friends come from as far away as Oregon, Maryland and Australia to watch Wayne compete on the racetrack. In addition to his two daughters, one of his biggest supporters is his 87-year old mother, Jean Shover. And when Wayne goes racing, he is also cheered on by his fiancee, Leslie Warren, his sons-in-law, Rick and Doug, and his grandson, Joshua.

"Dad's passion is his cars," said his daughter, Kari, "and he loves working on them and racing them. He's also great fun to be around, always joking and being kind to others. As long as I can remember, he's had a sparkle in his eye and a love for life, and we're all just thrilled that he was able to win a championship doing the thing he loves most -- racing. He's a wonderful man, an awesome dad, and boy is he going to be surprised to see his picture on the front page of the News-Ledger!"

Yolo supervisor to join race to replace Assem. Lois Wolk

MARIKO YAMADA

Yolo County Supervisor Mariko Yamada is scheduled to announce her candidacy for the 8th District Assembly race today at noon at the county courthouse.

Yamada will compete with West Sacramento Mayor Christopher Cabaldon – and perhaps other candidates – for the Democratic nomination in next year's June primary. The winner will run in the general election in November, 2008. The district is considered to be safely Democratic.

Current Assemblywoman Lois Wolk, also a Democrat, will relinquish the post due to term limits. But Wolk expects to pursue the state senate seat now held by Democrat Mike Machado – also stepping down due to term limits.

Yamada is a resident of Davis.

A press release from the supervisor describes her as "a mother with a life long commitment to civil rights advocacy and training in social work. . . (who) understands the social and economic issues facing California's working families."

If elected to office, said her campaign, Yamada would be the first Japanese-American woman elected to state office.

City council session: low on radar screen

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

West Sacramento's city council met for two "special" daytime meetings Feb. 20-21, discussing strategic priorities for the city's future. While the city met the "letter of the law" in publicizing these meetings – posting the agenda last Friday at city hall – the meetings weren't mentioned on the city website in the section dedicated to city council activities. It was tougher than usual for the public to find out about the special meetings in order to observe or provide input.

City Clerk Kryss Rankin yesterday said the buck stops with her on that omission.

"In terms of my thought process, I tended to think of this as a 'staff workshop that involved the council' instead of a 'council workshop that involved the staff,'" she told the News-Ledger.

So she organized it primarily as she would a staff meeting, Rankin added, and left it off the council's schedule at www.cityofwestsacramento.org.

The special meetings had been announced at a regular council meeting, she added.

An agenda for the meetings was released the prior Friday. Because the News-Ledger publishes on Wednesdays, and the meetings were held on a Tuesday and Wednesday, there was little opportunity to give the meeting advance publicity in the News-Ledger.

Did the public show up to watch the special meetings?

Rankin reports that one member of the public attended the council workshop on one day, and two members of the public attended on the other.

She added that there had been "absolutely no attempt" to discourage the public from attending – and said the annual workshop will be better publicized next year.

Minutes from the workshops aren't yet available, but a "table of contents" from a workbook used in the sessions lists items such as "strategic planning," a "report card" for the city in 2006, "core beliefs" and an "execution-action agenda 2007."

Making the grades: WUSD rethinks schools

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Board members SANDRA VARGAS, DAVID WESTIN, BARRY KALAR, MARY LELAND and MATT STEGMAN listen to public testimony Thursday at River City's cafeteria. Superintendent Steve Lawrence is at the extreme right.

It was a long and bumpy night for the superintendent, staff and school board at Thursday's meeting of the Washington Unified School District trustees. The board began with "closed session" discussions at 6 p.m., then opened for public work at 7 p.m. The gavel didn't bang until well past midnight.

The meeting, held at River City High School's cafeteria, was marked by spirited public input – most often from those questioning the district's ideas for changing local elementary schools and Golden State Middle School. Parents spoke both for and against the idea of moving some or all of the district's 7th and 8th graders from GSMS to new or converted "K-8" schools. And they spoke for and against the idea of bringing a new "early college high school" charter school to what is now Westfield Elementary School in the city's north area.

The college-prep charter school is proposed by educational partners from UC Davis and Sacramento City College, who have $400,000 in grant money from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation. They want to help put kids whose backgrounds make them unlikely college prospects onto a college-bound educational track.

"It would be a grade 6-12 environment and would include a very rigorous college-going program," reported Dr. Harold G. Levine, dean of education at UC Davis. The school would expose kids to actual college classes as well as offer them academic preparation and other support to get ready for college.

The district is considering phasing in the new charter school at Westfield Elementary, which is WUSD's poorest performer on test scores and is the subject of state intervention. The charter school would legally be able to give admittance priority to neighboring families, although others would be able to apply. The campus would phase out its early grades, and many future students from the neighborhood would be redirected to other elementary school campuses.

Several critics in the school board audience argued that the plan wasn't fair to families who depend on Westfield.

"The plan (for the charter school) looks great," commented Irene Eklund. "I'm concerned about the neighborhood. I know why you

'It's only hay...'

Caught crop stealing

Yolo County District Attorney Jeff Reisig reports that his office has obtained a felony conviction for a man who had been stealing hay.

An 18-month investigation led to charges against Dale McMihelk for helping himself to $150,000 of the crop from Yolo County farmers, said the D.A.'s office. The thefts occurred over several years.

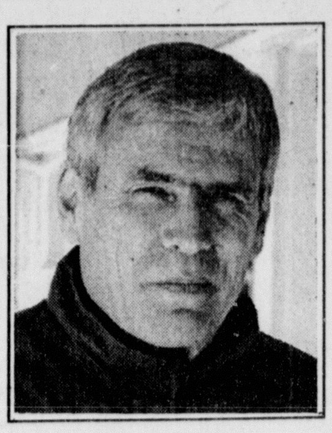

"Some people did not want to take this crime seriously, saying it was 'just hay'," reported Reisig in a press release. "The farmers of this county work hard for their hay crop and it is their livelihood."

Hay is the number-three agricultural product in Yolo County, the D.A. added.

On Thursday, McMihelk entered a "no contest" plea to the felony charge in front of Judge David Rosenberg. He will be sentenced on April 13.

Please! No more Anna Nicole Smith

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

I know you're always supposed to speak kindly of the dead, but am I the only one in town who is going to barf if I have to see Anna Nicole Smith's face on my television screen one more time? There must be millions of others throughout the country who feel the same way I do, but you would never know it by the way those in charge of network and cable television programming do their jobs. For whatever reason, all the big media decision-makers seem to be convinced that Ms. Smith's death is the most important event to take place in this country since O.J. did the unthinkable, and tragically, judging by the ratings, they may be right.

This past week, almost every news program (or entertainment show for that matter) I could locate with my little T.V. clicker was focused on the details coming out of a courthouse in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, where a weepy bozo of a judge was taking six whole days of testimony in an effort to determine where Ms. Smith should be buried -- in the Bahamas next to her son, or near her relatives back in her home state of Texas.

Other questions that seemed to be endlessly discussed on every channel included: Was her body (which apparently was rapidly decomposing somewhere in a Florida mortuary) going to be turned over to her lawyer/companion, Howard K. Stern, or to Virgie Arthur, her estranged mother? Was the real father of her 5-month old daughter, Dannielyn, her ex-boyfriend, Larry Birkhead, or poor, distraught Howard K. Stern, or someone else who has yet to come forward? Did Ms. Smith die of natural causes, or was it a drug overdose? Was Ms. Smith, just before her death, subsisting on nothing but Methadone and Slim-Fast, and about to change her will?

Who cares?

Anyway, it didn't matter if it was Larry King Live, or CNN with Anderson Cooper, or Fox News, or the Today Show, or MSNBC, or even regular network news programs, everywhere I looked, there was vintage video of Anna Nicole Smith, mugging for the camera and doing her Marilyn Monroe impressions; or strolling out of countless courthouses during her endless battle to inherit a fortune from some old geezer she had married for his money ages ago; or doing something stupid or tasteless on a reality show she used to star in.

Bob Herbert, a syndicated columnist who appears in the Sacramento Bee from time to time, put America's need to endlessly watch such garbage this way: "Instead of turning away chastened, shamed, we homed in like happy vultures. Whatever entertainment value Smith had when she was alive increased exponentially when she was kind enough to die for us. Now she's on the tube around the clock."

He went on to say that we have become a nation of entertainment junkies, at times incapable of turning our attention to real problems like global warming and the war in Iraq, and that the line that used to separate our news and entertainment no longer exists. "The nation may be at war, and al-Qaida may be gearing up for a rematch, but that's no fun, not when Britney Spears is shaving off her hair and Jennifer Aniston is reported to have a new nose and the thrill-a-minute watch over Anna Nicole's remains is still the hottest thing on TV."

"What in the world is happening to this county?" I asked a friend of mine who is often on the receiving end of similar harangues from me. "We elect fools to high office, we go to war just for the hell of it, we can't find bin Laden's worthless ass, New Orleans is still a mess two years after the flood, less than 35 percent of our high school graduates are proficient in reading, Ford and all the other major American automakers are going broke, you can't get a politician to tell you the truth even if his or her life depends on it, 40 million people don't have medical insurance, the icecaps are melting, and it costs $400,000 to buy a decent house. But judging from what I see on television, all the nation really seems to care about is Anna Nicole Smith."

"I have a little theory about that," said my friend, who always has a way of lightening my load.

"Which is?"

"We're coming to the final days."

"The final days?"

"That's right. The final days."

"You mean when God returns to the earth."

"Oh, no. I'm sure God doesn't want anything to do with this mess we humans have created down here on earth."

"Then what are you talking about?"

"I'm talking about the final days before Hillary Rodham Clinton becomes president."

"And then what happens?" I asked with interest.

"Then I move to China!"

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The NBA All-Star game was a big television bust even with all the glamour and glitter of the Las Vegas heavy rollers. The TV ratings continued to drop for the fifth consecutive season from a 6.6 in 2003 to a dismal 4.2 audience rating in 2007. Do you think the NBA is suffering from a bad boy's image or from a grossly over priced product?

Of course, the NBA All-Star game didn't include any players from the Kings so you can probably guess why the local ratings were down but now the league officials are thinking about adding a little international flavor to the mid-season classic.

They are considering a game between U.S. born players and those from other countries. The problem with the All-Star game is with the fans, who continue to vote for players who are the most popular and for not the young players who are having an outstanding season.

A good example is how Yao Ming, the Chinese National center from the Houston Rockets, received the most votes to play in the game but has been out most of the season with an injury and the same goes for Shaq, who returned to action just in time to limp around the court in Las Vegas! Dwayne Wade played with a sore shoulder instead of resting just to show off in Vegas and now Miami is faced with losing his services for the rest of the year because he dislocated his shoulder again.

Anyway, real basketball in the March Madness is heading to Sacramento on Thursday, March 15 and Saturday, March 17 in the form of the first round of the Men's NCAA basketball tournament. Hopefully, the No.4 ranked UCLA Bruins or the Stanford Cardinals lock up a berth in the Western Regional here at the Arco Arena.

I would love to see UCLA's All-American Affalo who is certain to be a top draft pick or how about watching the two seven-foot twins, Robin and Brook Lopez, from Stanford.

Bad news if you don't have your game tickets already because it may be too late! Tickets went on sale in March of 2006 and games are reported to be sold out.

By Richard Novoa

Not to worry, all the game will be shown on TV during the three weeks of glorious college basketball madness!

Kings Korner

The Kings (24-31) East Coast road trip was a bigger bust than the NBA All-Star game. The boys from Sactown lost 3 out 4 games with their only win coming on Sunday. The Maloof's couldn't pull the trigger on any player trades so it looks like the Kings will ride out the season with the current players on the roster.

The Kings did manage to beat Indiana 110-93 on Sunday night but star forward Ron Artest was AWOL and nowhere in sight. Artest, who was granted the night off because of personal reasons, was not listed on the injury report.

The good news was the Kings didn't need Ron-Ron this time because Kevin Martin racked up 35 points and the Kings defense held the Pacers to a season low 38 percent shooting and their worst home loss of the season.

The Kings will return to the Arco on Wednesday night (7p.m) to host the Charlotte Bobcats before they fly down south to play the Los Angeles Lakers on Friday night (7:30 p.m.). The Kings will then have another back-to-back road game but this time in Portland (7 p.m.) on Saturday night before they return home to the friendly confines of the Arco on March 6 (Pacers).

Korner Kicks

The Mexican National soccer team, who is playing a friendly on Wednesday night (8 p.m. - ch. 19) in San Diego against Venezuela, will be playing in Oakland at McAfee Coliseum on March 28th (8 p.m.) against Ecuador. Call 510-638-4627 for tickets or go on line at sjearthquakes.com.

Enjoy your day – see ya next week!

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• It was, of course, noted wit and poet Ogden Nash who made the following sage observation: "Middle age is when you've met so many people that every new person you meet reminds you of someone else."

• In a recent column I mentioned that if you've been drinking and decide to walk home instead of driving, you might want to reconsider, because studies show that as many people are fatally injured while walking drunk as while driving drunk. To eliminate any misunderstanding that may have occurred, I'd like to make it clear that I was in no way encouraging or endorsing drunk driving. Just call a cab, for Pete's sake!

• When he wrote "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," Scottish novelist Robert Louis Stevenson didn't have to draw too much on his considerable imagination. The creepy title character was actually based on a real person, William Brodie, who was a deacon and a robber.

• The largest bird in the world, the ostrich, wasn't burdened with an overabundance of smarts: Its eye is larger than its brain.

• On April 15, 1912, an operator of the Marconi radiotelegraph system then in use received an emergency alert from the Titanic. Knowing the Titanic's reputation as being "unsinkable," the man joked, "Why don't you send out this new call, S.O.S. — it might be your last chance."

• If you're a coffee drinker — and even if you're not — you've probably heard of the Maxwell House brand. The original Maxwell House was actually a luxury hotel in Nashville, Tenn., that was known for its excellent coffee.

Close-up look at engineering, architecture

River City High School last month kicked off a new mentoring program designed to acquaint interested students with career fields in architecture and engineering.

Ron Pina, teacher and organizer of the "ACE Mentoring" program, said over 30 students were involved. Last week, Pena, along with teacher Spencer Yarwood and about 30 students, boarded a bus for a field trip to the Nacht & Lewis architecture firm, then on to a visit with engineer Dave Hutchinson of Buehler & Buehler, and then to the State of California's General Services power plant, where they met with architecture and engineering professionals.

At the state's power plant, engineer Dave Talley told the students about the role the facility played in heating and cooling all the state buildings in downtown Sacramento. There are about a mile of tunnels under downtown connecting the buildings, he reported.

ABOVE RIGHT: Engineer Dave Talley tells visiting RCHS students about how a 'central power plant' heats and cools all the state buildings in downtown Sacramento, giving the youths a chance to walk among the boilers and chillers as well as to visit the underground "tunnels." Tailey told the students that he earned his career after earning a two-year degree in mechanical-electrical technology from Sacramento City College.

want to close the school, because then it starts with a clean slate."

Board member David Westin said that he, as a young immigrant in the Los Angeles area, was bused to a similar charter school that UCLA had partnered to develop.

"I cannot say enough positive things about the education I received at that school," he told the crowd. "I can't think of a better partnership the district can form. As a fellow parent, I want my kid to have the best education possible."

Board member Matt Stegman responded after several community members said they felt "railroaded" by what they perceived was a "done" decision to replace Westfield with the charter school.

"In a similar type of community, 100 percent of the kids (at a school like this) went on to college or university," he remarked. "For people who are convinced they are being railroaded and decisions have been made, that's just not true."

The presentation was for "information" only – no final action was taken.

Many people also responded negatively to a presentation by Superintendent Steve Lawrence outlining several possibilities for shrinking (or eliminating) Golden State Middle School and moving those 7th and 8th grades to what are currently K-6 classes.

The district is now building one such K-8 school in Southport, he reported, but it could convert existing K-6 schools as well.

The conversion and operation of K-8 schools will both bring added cost to the district, he summarized, offering several scenarios in which different numbers of K-8 schools were created and different student body sizes (from 540 to 900) were considered for those schools.

"What we found when looking at those models, based on what we're currently spending on students, the 900 (student) model is more in line with what we're doing now," he reported. Creating smaller K-8 schools would be more expensive, he added.

With a 720-student school and 80 kids per grade, a K-8 campus would cost more than $200,000 per year more to operate than the current model.

"That's money that would come out of the general fund if we need to augment that," said Lawrence. The general fund is the same fund that pays for teacher salaries.

"If we went to the 900-student model and if we (converted) all the schools, we would need $28 million," Lawrence said. "Currently, in the capital improvements plan, there is $15 million, so there is a shortfall there."

A district-wide survey showed 76 percent support for the K-8 concept, Lawrence reported. But many areas showed poor participation in the survey, and there may be local opposition, he added.

A group of young students from Elkhorn Elementary in the north area joined in making a presentation against the K-8 schools.

"That will make about 900 kids in our school," one said. "We don't want that many students in our school."

"First you did not want to give a good contract to our teachers, and now you want to put more kids in our school," said a second. "We think we deserve better."

Several adults criticized the drive towards K-8 schools also.

Southport resident Crystal Miller was one of those who backed the developing plan.

"Those of us in the south side feel just like the families on the north side," she told the board. "We want what's best for our children. We want our kids to succeed. Our middle school is in the third year of (underperforming test scores). I would like to encourage the board to offer K-8 as an option for our students."

Other parents added their comments. The board's discussion also slid into a lengthy question-and-answer session about cost overruns in building a new high school and elementary school, and about the district's overall financial picture. Officials expect to have to use another school bond and other mechanisms to meet facilities shortfalls in coming years.

A decision by the school board on the K-8 plan is scheduled for March.

Feb. 21, 11:48 a.m.

On Partridge Road, a burglary in progress was reported. An officer saw a possible suspect vehicle, and contacted the driver. The driver was on probation. A search of the man's residence turned up possible stolen property, methamphetamines and drug paraphernalia. He was arrested.

Feb. 21

The California Highway Patrol (based on Reed Avenue in West Sacramento's northwest) asked police to schedule extra patrols near a "park & ride" parking lot south of I-80 during the evenings. There had been recent vehicle burglaries, including five reported on Feb. 20. The CHP asked police to "field interview" suspicious persons.

Feb. 21

Officers responded to a strong-arm robbery on Evergreen Circle, where a victim had been assaulted and robbed of a coat. While an officer was taking a report, another officer saw a vehicle run a red light on Harbor Boulevard. Stopping the vehicle, the officer believed it may have held the suspects in the robbery case. The victim identified all four of the people during an "in-field show-up" and the victim's stolen jacket was found in the car. Two of the suspects went to jail, and two to juvenile hall.

Feb. 22

A Webster Street resident reported someone had stolen the motor off a boat parked in his driveway.

Feb. 23, 12:29 a.m.

Two male suspects wearing purple and white masks entered a store on the 1000-block of Sacramento Avenue. One was armed with a handgun. They obtained $20 in $1 bills and fled on foot.

Feb. 23, 10:19 p.m.

An officer conducted a field sobriety test on a 20-year old woman stopped near May Street and Bryte Avenue. While she was being tested for driving while drunk, a man arrived on the scene and reported that the vehicle she had been driving belonged to him, and she did not have permission to have it. She was arrested.

Feb. 23, night

A large "hip-hop" music concert was held at a veterans' hall on Drever Street, with over 300 in attendance. Many, including people from out of town, were dressed in "gang attire." Police ending their shift were held over to help monitor the event. At about 12:06 a.m., officers saw about 10 shots fired, but no suspects were located and no one was hit. Units from the sheriff's department and CHP and a Sacramento police helicopter helped shut down the party and disburse partygoers.

Feb. 25, 3:01 p.m.

A Sacramento Avenue store manager confronted a shoplifter, who had a knife and fought store employees. One employee was cut and injured. The man was disarmed and held by staff, and then taken into custody by police.

Feb. 25

The neighbor of a Portsmouth Avenue man asked police to check on the man, who had been last seen about 24 hours earlier, intoxicated and falling down. The neighbor said he had put the man to bed at the residence, and hadn't seen him since. Police contacted the missing man's brother in Washington State, who asked them to force entry and check. Police broke a small window in the rear door and got in. The man was found dead by police. The neighbor said the deceased had had medical problems.

Feb. 24

West Sacramento police assisted as Sacramento police gang units visited a St. John Street residence during an investigation on gang and weapons violations. A Tech 9 machine pistol with an extended magazine was recovered. The suspect had been stopped in a vehicle in Sacramento and found in possession of a loaded .40 caliber semiautomatic handgun, and admitted being a gang member and having a second illegal weapon at the house.

Feb. 24, 10:43 p.m.

Officers tried to stop a car for vehicle code violations, but the driver failed to yield, eventually stopping in IKEA's parking lot. Police conducted a "high risk" stop there, and ordered him to exit the vehicle, but he refused and was "acting strange." Police deployed a perimeter and spike strips to keep him from leaving, and tried to talk him into surrendering. He made "furtive movements" in the vehicle. Eventually, he was Tasered and pulled out. The subject went to a Woodland hospital for psychiatric evaluation.

Feb. 25 12:15 a.m.

Officers responded to the report of a large fight at a Sunset Avenue club. A man reported he had been assaulted by about 10 people, but was very intoxicated and unable to identify them.

Brain Training Works

There have been a number of studies that show how "brain stretcher" exercises can improve cognitive abilities, but none have shown these exercises actually carry over to help in everyday life — until now.

ACTIVE, a seven-year study reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association, shows without a doubt that training to specifically sharpen the human brain has long-lasting effects and carries over into improved daily functioning. What's key about this study is that it not only relied on what the participants reported about their lives, but there was testing with specific and measurable results. Also key is that this study was a formal clinical trial financed by the National Institute on Aging.

The study involved training in three different areas — memory, reasoning and speed of processing information — over a five-week period. There was a control group that received no training. Each participant received 10 training sessions, and then booster sessions 11 and 35 months later. Only 10 percent of the training focused on daily living skills, yet it carried over to improved performance with demanding tasks such as dealing with finances, using the phone, shopping and meal preparation.

The people in the study were a good cross-section of adults. Some lived in senior housing, some in their own homes, some were referred from clinics and hospitals. All lived independently. The youngest was 65.

The improvement of cognitive ability was immediate during training. At the end of the five-year study, all three groups had retained their improved cognitive ability. All three groups reported less difficulty with daily living skills than the control group that had no training.

But it was the speed-of-processing training that gave the best overall, long-term results, and those who had booster training along the way fared even better — 300 percent better than the control group.

The bottom line: You CAN delay cognitive slowdown!

The Sacramento River registered two feet eleven inches U. S. gauge at the Southern Pacific bridge yesterday. This reading was taken about three P.M. when the tide was low and several sandbars showed above the Southern Pacific bridge. Later on toward seven o'clock the gauge showed a reading of three fee ten inches, or a rise of 11 inches.

T. D. McAnulty left last Thursday evening for San Francisco and Los Angeles to be gone for a period of about seven days. Mr. McAnulty has various interests up and down the Coast that demand his attention, and as a consequence he is forced to make frequent trips to outside points.

F. O. Emley, an official of the Motor Vehicle Department of the State, but located mostly in Oakland, was a visitor in Westgate last Thursday. His business was of a financial character, demanding a speedy return to his headquarters in Oakland.

Frank R. Alexander of Oakland and Ed. Engbo of Minneapolis were visitors in Westgate during the past week and both purchased homesites on which they have already contracted to build their homes. Both are about to move their families to Westgate and make permanent homes in this district. Both are mechanics and anticipate being able to find work in Sacramento and in this section of Yolo County.

Miss C. Lowe, employed in the office of the West Sacramento Company and Reclamation District 900, has gone on her vacation, which she is going to spend mostly in San Francisco and other Bay points.

McNally and Partridge, owners of the West Side Auto Camp, report that during the hot spell of the past week tourist travel has declined considerably and those who are passing through are people who usually stop at hotels. They expect, however, that the real tourist travel will be very thick on and after August 1st.

Mrs. Joseph Pereira has been somewhat improved in health during the past week, but was still under the attention of physicians yesterday. Mrs. Pereira is gradually overcoming a breakdown which she suffered several weeks ago and expects to be on her feet in a short while. Her husband believes that a long rest in the mountain section will be very beneficial to her.

The West Sacramento Auto Camp reports an increasing patronage during the past week. In fact, the number of tourists who stop overnight and continue on their way the next day is multiplying, according to the owner, Joe Pereira. Those who make long stops are now spending much of their time in the fruit orchards picking fruit. Last Wednesday night every cabin in the West Sacramento Auto Camp was filled, and several who did not have tents or accommodations of their own were forced to go farther on.

Wallace Fraser will leave Saturday morning for a two weeks' vacation in Yosemite Valley. "Wally," as he is familiarly known, has been working very hard since the first of the year and feels that a rest would benefit him a good deal. He refused to say yesterday who was going with him on his trip to the Yosemite Valley, but suspicions are rife, and indeed rumors have been current, that he is going to be accompanied by a very pleasant and amiable companion.

Henry Leinberger returned yesterday from Santa Cruz, San Francisco and other points in the south, where he has spent a vacation of ten days.

William Barry, a former resident of Washington, died in San Francisco on July 20th and his remains were cremated at Cypress Lawn Cemetery. During many years Barry was a resident of Washington, where he was employed in the cattle business, but he also worked for several years in the old pioneer mills on the river levee near the Southern Pacific Depot. Barry was well thought of in this community, but moved several years ago to San Francisco, where he was employed as caretaker by the Young Men's Institute for their building.

G. Fuller, whose home is on Carly Way, Sacramento, was arrested last Monday by Traffic Officer Jacobs for speeding on the highway west of Washington at a rate of fifty miles an hour. He was ordered to appear before Judge Barry this forenoon, July 31st, for sentence.

Johnny King will take charge of the ferry at Elk Slough tomorrow, August 1st. He has been making his home in Riverbank for some time past, but moved his family today to a house in the vicinity of the ferry.

Mrs. Tom Dupzyk left last Tuesday evening for Topeka, Kansas, where she expects to make an extended visit with friends and relatives. During her absence Tom will do some of the cooking and some of the housecleaning, but he has promised himself not to overdo either.

The work has been started by Supervisor Buckingham on the streets of Riverbank. Those streets that have been graveled are being plowed up and rolled so as to place them in condition for automobile travel. No work has been done on these streets for some time and the improvement now being made under the direction of Supervisor Buckingham has been badly needed. Residents of the town are very anxious to have this work done and fully appreciate what Mr. Buckingham is doing to make things comfortable for them.

Mrs. P. R. George, Mrs. P. O. Van Deren, Gyneth Meyers and Lois Collins went to Chico last Sunday purposely to leave Miss Collins at her home. Miss Collins found that her folks had gone on their vacation and consequently was forced to return to Washington for another week or ten days.

Bright Future for Westgate Is Now Assured in Backing of Bondholders' Committee

Confirming reports that have been current during the past week, word was given the Independent yesterday by Philip I. Manson that the Westgate proposal now has the backing and support of the Committee of the Bondholders of West Sacramento.

In other words, the capitalists who form the committee representing the bondholders of the West Sacramento District are behind Westgate to promote its best interests to help it along financially and to make it an ideal homesite for those seeking residences in this locality.

Speaking to the Independent, Mr. Manson said:

"Three months ago I was a visitor in Westgate and was not oversanguine at the proposal as it then appeared to me.

"Today, however, I see such a wonderful development that I feel absolutely assured that this district can be made one of the ideal homesites around Sacramento.

"I can see such improvements as I thought would not come for several years in the future, and already the accomplishments that have been made bear evidence of the fact that Westgate can be made an ideal spot, not only as a homesite but as a manufacturing center and as a business center.

"The advantages this section has over many other suburban tracts in and around Sacramento are too numerous to permit this land to lie idle while other sections go ahead demanding ever so much higher prices.

"So far as the committee of the bondholders of the West Sacramento Company is concerned, I feel satisfied that they will do their portion to promote the district. A contract has been let to install six-inch mains in all the residence streets to carry water to the homes. The pipe is already on the way and as soon as it arrives the work of installation will be started.

"Electric lines are now being extended to every street on which a home is located. Any home about to be occupied can get an immediate supply of electricity.

"It will take but a very short time to secure a supply of gas, because the pipe line extending across the river between Sacramento and Woodland is only located a few hundred yards away trom this district.

"Another thing that I want to see done to help along the locality is the improvement of the entrance. At the present time the water works and several old barns disfigure the roadway between headquarters and the Sacramento River. These will be removed as soon as possible or moved to other localities.

"Indeed, I feel very much elated over what has already been done and I am going to encourage the other members of the Bondholders' Committee to give all the backing possible to the promotion of Westgate."

Mr. Manson spent all day Thursday looking over the Westgate district. He even went as far south in the West Sacramento District as the southern levee and the pump house located on the west levee.

Yesterday afternoon, in company with Mr. A. F. Turner, he made another trip of inspection along the river levee as far south as River View.

The idea that drew the attention of Mr. Manson most was the construction of thirty-five new homes now going along steadily under the direction of McAnulty Brothers and the Westgate Realty Company.

All these homes have been built or nearly finished in a period of less than four months. Other homes are about to be built, and in all contracts have been let for nearly fifty residences.

Inquiry was made yesterday by a Sacramento caterer for the erection of a skating rink and dance hall in Westgate. The proposer of this improvement has abundant capital to make it a success and if a suitable site can be found available the building will be constructed.

BOOSTERS' CLUB BEWAILS LACK OF INTEREST IN NURSING

Matters of little interest were taken up last Tuesday evening in the town hall by the Washington Boosters' Club.

Perhaps the principal question before the meeting was the noted lack of attendance at the nursing courses being given in the public school building by County Health Nurse Miss Rozzie Carrow.

Only a few women and children attend these nursing classes, and yet they are deemed of vital importance to every housewife who has the care of a husband or growing children. Women and girls are taught, in these classes, how to render first aid in case of accident and are also taught how sick people should be treated when a physician cannot be found when a serious case of sickness happens.

The ladies of the club who make it a business to attend the classes are loud in their praises of the work being done by the County Health Nurse.

STABBING AFFRAY NEAR BEAN WAREHOUSE THURSDAY NIGHT

Taken to the emergency hospital last night suffering from a knife wound in the stomach, George Bulatobich, 1402 Third Street, driver of a taxicab, told the police that a passenger of his cab and an unknown man started a fight on the Yolo side of the river, south of the M Street bridge, and that during the fight he had been accidentally injured. Bulatobich's wound was not serious, and he was discharged from the hospital.

Shortly after the taxicab driver's departure, William "Red" Lee, who has been arrested by the police several times on various charges, was taken to the emergency hospital by an unidentified man for treatment of two superficial knife stabs, one in the abdomen and the other in the back.

Lee, who gave his present address as Box 864, Roseville, informed the police that he had been very drunk and remembered that either two or three Mexicans had been in his party. He is of the opinion that one of the Mexicans wielded the knife which caused the wounds, but declared that he is not certain.

The police were trying to connect the two stabbing cases.

WOODLAND, July 9.—Charles Luce, Elkhorn district farmer, just "had a hunch" his truck was going to be stolen when he left it in a field unattended. As a precaution he removed the spark plugs and the coil.

The following day he returne found that his "hunch" was one—the truck was gone. T apparently had towed it away J. W. Monroe now is lookin truck.

WESTGATE IRON AND FOUNDRY COMPANY TO ENLARGE PLANT

Within a few days Green Brothers of Durham, Butte County, will move their foundry and machine works to Westgate and will incorporate their plant with the plant of Dr. Boyd, which has been in operation as a foundry and iron works for several years past.

To handle the new institution an incorporation has been formed with a capitalization of $150,000.

Green Brothers have taken stock in this incorporation in payment for their plant and machinery and will add to the plant of Dr. Boyd a large and growing business that has been in operation in Durham for several years past.

When the incorporation is completed it is the purpose of the foundry company to erect a two-story brick building measuring 30x120 feet to accommodate the machine shop and foundry.

The products to be turned out by this new incorporation, which will be known as the Westgate Iron and Foundry Company, are ornamental medals made from steel, aluminum, copper, nickel and other alloys.

The class of goods to be manufactured are automobile ornaments, light fixtures, lamps, shades and such other materials as are in common and daily use in the building of homes and other structures.

Green Brothers expect to be in Westgate within the next ten days with several carloads of material they have been using in their business in Durham.

EXTENSIONS BEING MADE TO WASHINGTON WATER MAINS

Under the direction of Ralph Shaw, a crew of men has been busy during the past week extending the water main on James Street west from Rocky Point to Eighth Street.

This new installation is six-inch pipe and is being placed to supply the residences and home owners in the northern part of the town. The extension runs westward from Second Street as far as Sixth.

Another extension is about to be made on Second Street from the water works to Margaret Street, or the southern town limits. This extension will also be a six-inch pipe and will be connected with all fire plugs that are now in that district. Preparations have been made to continue the old fire plugs in use for the time being or until the fire trustees can see their way clear to replace the plugs that are now in use with those of more modern type.

The old water main on Second Street has been in use for many years, and it has been feared for some time past by the directors of the water works that in case of fire or extra pressure this water main might not hold. Anyway, the main on Second Street has become clogged more or less and needed replacing so as to give better service to the home owners in the southern portion of town.

SPLENDID BREWERY RAIDED BY OFFICERS NORTH OF TOWN

One of the largest and best equipped breweries ever discovered by local prohibition agents was raided Saturday on the Greer-Reeves ranch in Yolo County. A. H. Long, Joe Oliver and Tony Fortado were taken into custody and 3500 bottles of beer were confiscated.

Tanks were found with a capacity of 10,000 gallons and apparatus capable of turning out 3000 bottles of beer a day. The officers said that near-beer was loaded with alcohol and then recharged and that this place was the origin of the largest percentage of illegal beer sold in Sacramento.

A cow shed was utilized for the purpose and the presence of 100 head of cattle in no way embarrassed the brewers. The place has been in operation about two months.

News-Ledger Editorial

Future shape of the local schools

Some thoughts after viewing the school district's discussion of a plan to re-shape the kindergarten-through-eighth grade landscape in local public schools:

■ The "elephant in the room" is cost. The district is committed to building one K-8 school, but converting other current K-6 schools to handle K-8s will cost money to build and extra money to operate. It's simply not clear that the district has the funds. Local taxpayers will be fairly resistant to the possibility of a new bond measure to finish building a new high school -- something they will soon be told they need. So even the prospect of paying for the new high school is still foggy. Paying for other new facilities and programs (such as providing parents the choice of using a K-8 or a middle school) may be very tough.

■ Some parents of Westfield Elementary School students expressed dismay on Thursday that the district is considering the creation of a special college preparation K-8 school at their K-6 campus. While the campus could give priority to kids who are local, some local kids would in the future have to go to a farther campus. So the college-prep facility represents both an opportunity and a threat. Yet the campus's test scores are still under-par, and maintaining the status quo is not a good plan, either.

■ Proponents of the proposed new college-prep charter school talked about readying local students to succeed in the "global market." Administrators mentioned offering foreign languages – for example, Spanish and Russian.

These are certainly excellent languages to teach in this community and this state. They are spoken widely in West Sacramento and the region.

But Americans should also start to pay more attention to other languages if they wish to be successful in the "global market" of the 21st century. Certainly, the languages of the Middle East hold obvious value to us. Likewise, America this century will be doing a lot of business and negotiating with emerging nations such as China (the next superpower?) and India.

It wouldn't hurt to speak their tongues.

Selected languages and cultures of Asia would make a good focus for the curriculum of a West Sacramento "charter" school.

Letters to the Editor

Watch the schools!

Thursday night's School Board meeting went on until nearly 1:00 am. There are far too many issues to bring up with the limited space for this letter, so I will try to address the most pressing issues.

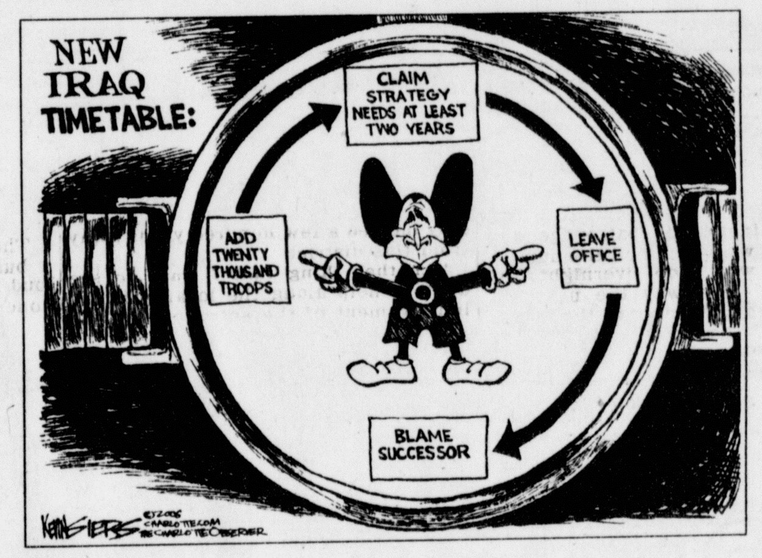

The reconfiguration of our District to be completely K-8, at a cost to the taxpayers of $28 million, without a middle school seems to be the issue moving the fastest. There are many things to be concerned about with this issue, mainly the fact that the District does not have the money to pay for this. We have not built the high school that this community passed a bond for in 2004 and with the blacktop and enormous detention pond you see at that site, we've spent over $68 million. At the Bond Oversight Committee meeting this past week, we were told that the project is $6 million more over budget than the original budget, which will make this project well over $60 million over budget. That added to the fact that Elementary School #9 (located on Stonegate) is $4 million over budget. So, with those facts alone, the budget cannot support going K-8 in our entire District. You also need to realize that our Superintendent intends on going out for another bond within the next 1-2 years to pay off this debt. Keep in mind, we are already paying on two bonds.

Another concerning factor, brought up by a community member at the board meeting, with the K-8 concept is that the Administration is marketing this as a "product". We heard all kinds of ideas about the different electives that will be offered and all the great things they plan on doing but the Administration did not point out the fact that the instruction time, especially for core classes such as math and english, will be cut dramatically. Currently, the students at Golden State Middle School receive a double block of English and extra math to help prepare them for high school. Some classes with the K-8 configuration will be cut by as much as 93 minutes. With the continuous test score issues, how do we expect our students to be successful if they don't get that time in such important core classes?

I heard a lot of "what's fair and equal" but I don't see that in their plan. How is it fair to only add three new classrooms to Southport and Bridgeway Island but yet add 8 new classrooms to the schools that will be kept that are north of the deep water channel? How is it fair to build brand new schools at the south end of town (granted, that is were the new development currently is) but yet close schools or simply add on to old schools on the north end of town? Another question is, why weren't the parents at Westfield Elementary told the truth that not all the students would be left at the charter school that is for 6-12 grade students? Why weren't they told their children would be sent to Elkhorn. How is it fair to make Elkhorn the only bi-lingual school in the District? Isn't that the same thing as segregation?

Do all the Westmore Oaks Elementary parents and staff know that half of the school will be sent to Evergreen Elementary to allow construction on that campus next year? My children attended WMO and had an incredible experience. It's like a family there and parents treat the school like a private school by volunteering in the classrooms. WMO is also our top school in test scores not to mention the awards they've received, so why would we want to disrupt something that's working so well? The Administration doesn't seem to understand the families we would lose in our District with such poor decisions. My personal opinion in talking with some of them, is they don't care.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

"Norbit"

Running time: 100 minutes
MPAA rating: PG-13

Can you remember a time when Eddie Murphy was funny?

If so, you'd have to be over 30, because you'd have to go back to the days of "Delirious," "Raw," "Trading Places" and "Beverly Hills Cop" to find a movie where Eddie made you bust a gut with laughter. In the past few decades, all we've gotten from him is phoned-in performances and witless caricatures.

"Norbit" is a prime example of this, and probably the worst film Eddie's ever made. Yes, it's even worse than "Pluto Nash."

In "Norbit," Murphy plays a guy named Norbit, who is basically Steve Urkel with a bad fro. He grew up in a Chinese restaurant that doubled as an orphanage. I'll repeat that: A Chinese restaurant that doubled as an orphanage. Sure it makes no sense, but it gives Murphy a chance to don yellowface and give an offensive performance as an Asian man the likes of which we haven't seen since Jerry Lewis did it in the 1950s.

While at the orphanage, young Norbit falls in love with Kate. Their romance is cut short when she is adopted and moves away. Norbit then meets Rasputia, a morbidly obese girl with all the social graces of a rabid gorilla. She latches onto Norbit, and when they grow up, she forces him to marry her.

Years later, Kate (Thandie Newton) returns to buy the restaurant/orphange, but her plans are undermined by her conman fiance (Cuba Gooding Jr.) and Rasputia's three gangster brothers who want to turn the property into a strip club. It's now up to Norbit to save the orphanage.

There is nothing redeeming or funny about "Norbit." I can't recommend it — not even as a rental. If you're in the mood for a great Eddie Murphy movie, rent one of the films I mentioned above.

This blend of tropical and traditional is sure to stand out and leave everyone wanting more. Delicious Ham with Mango Glaze adds a sweet new tradition to your spring holiday table.

HAM WITH MANGO GLAZE

Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 1 hour

2 ripe mangos, peeled, pitted and cubed
¼ cup honey
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
1 boneless ham, about 3 lbs.

Preheat oven to 350°F. Place mangos, honey, lemon juice and spices in a blender or food processor; puree until smooth. Set aside ⅓ of the mixture for basting the ham during baking. (Place remaining glaze in serving dish to serve with ham.) Score the surface of the ham in a diamond pattern with a sharp knife and place in a shallow baking dish. Brush with reserved basting portion of mango glaze. Bake for 1 hour, basting with glaze frequently. Slice ham and serve with the remaining mango glaze. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Which foods and beverages do the most damage to a person's teeth?

"We've recently found that dark-colored energy drinks are staining teeth, in addition to previously noted dark-colored sodas. Carbonated beverages, especially soda, cause dry mouth and contribute to tooth decay. Any type of food that requires tearing with your teeth can fracture and even break portions of teeth off. Things like beef jerky, baguettes, etc."

People say that chewing on ice is bad for your teeth. Is that true?

"Yes, because chewing ice can cause micro-fractures, and if hit in just the 'wrong' spot, tooth breakage."

Any restrictions on what your children can eat?

"I do not place any restrictions on food my children can eat, but they must brush after every meal! I guess that should not be a surprise to your readers!"

If they made mouthwashes that tasted like _____, people might use them more often.

"Bubble gum, cinnamon and assorted fruit flavors."

Which vitamins and minerals are most important for good dental health?

"Vitamin C and calcium."
